WHO? AM I?

Margie is passionate about people and their work!

She helps leaders and their teams perform, even during times of stress.

Margie lost her passion for her work 15 years ago and was experiencing a lot of stress. She had just come out a 5-year journey of many failed IVF attempts which negatively impacted her marriage and work. She decided to change all of that. She left her executive role and marriage, and entered into an undergrad in Psychology, never thinking she would even get past the first semester.

Margie not only got through the first semester, she graduated, was accepted into an Honours program and received a Distinction for her Thesis on Leadership Performance and Wellbeing.

During her presentations, she openly shares her story, and that following her divorce, a financial tsunami, 3000 practice hours (mostly unpaid), and losing her own father to mental health challenges, she achieved a goal she never thought possible, as a registered Psychologist. Margie found her passion which is helping leaders and leadership teams reach their full potential. She is authentic, engaging and funny.

Margie has been coaching and consulting to organisations for over 25 years. This includes being an owner and partner in two businesses as well as leading and coaching teams in executive recruitment and search firms. Previously she had a ten-year career in IT, which included working in Silicon Valley at the age of 19. And she is also a trained actor!

Margie's approach offers an entertaining while commercial and psychological lens for people striving to reach their potential. Her research, professional experience and own life experience is proving to help leaders and their teams how to perform during times of stress, resulting in resilient, happier and high-performing organisations.

TESTIMONIALS

Margie is an engaging speaker whether it be for a small group or hundreds, and always leaves her audience excited and invigorated and armed with practical information to help them shape their future.

Caroline Morrissey, ex Manager Business & Diversity, Queensland Resources Council, Ph: 0429 550 646

Margie Ireland is an engaging and knowledgeable speaker who captures the room from the get go, through her genuine authentic style that allows people to trust her immediately. Margie's expertise and knowledge should be shared with the masses and repeatedly.

Anna Chipperfield, Head of People and Culture, The Business Depot, Ph: 0455 664 009

Margie recently ran a workshop for the Multicap Group where 70% of our middle and senior leaders who all agreed that this experience had provided them with clear insights in developing their leadership skills. We receive this type of feedback every time Margie engages with our leaders and is why we would recommend her and the services she offers. We have also engaged Margie for executive coaching on a number of occasions and she adds great value in that area as well.

Joanne Jessop, Group CEO Multicap, Ph: 0407 427 465

As we know, the only constant is change. So the challenges a leader will face can never be predicted. Margie brings a wealth of experience as a psychologist and author, helping to inspire leaders build better teams. As a facilitator, she brings a contagious energy and enthusiasm. As well as the warmth and compassion as a friend.

Annastacia Palaszczyk

Margie attended our team offsite and presented a number of valuable and interesting insights on Mindfulness and how to manage stress and efficiency in the workplace, the content was well curated and also well received.

Paul Carson-Zangor, Snr Advisor, Performance & Reward, Woolworths Aust. Ph: 0414 515 607

What made me a fan of Margie was her remarkable ability to hold you accountable to your values & purpose, but also to ask the right questions to elicit deep self-reflection which ultimately led to positive change. I attribute a lot of my success in gaining clarity & progression in my career to Margie.

Sally Callie, Triple Olympian & Educator.
